

CDC Evaluation Fellowship Program trains future public health evaluators.

The CDC Evaluation Fellowship Program aims to expand the capacity of CDC programs to conduct evaluation and increase its usefulness and impact. The Fellowship signifies CDC's dual commitment to ensuring program evaluation is a standard part of practice and to developing a cadre of professionals with the skills to make that happen.

For the past decade, the two-year Fellowship Program has recruited and trained a diverse pool of evaluators. Across 10 cohorts, 189 Fellows have been placed with CDC host programs. More than half of Fellows who graduate found jobs at CDC in various roles immediately after the Fellowship.

Become an evaluator at CDC

The Fellowship is intended to be a two-year program, with the second year being contingent on satisfactory performance and availability of funds. Fellows are hired under Title 42 training appointments and receive CDC employee benefits.

Evaluation Fellows receive

On-the-job training to apply evaluation skills in federal public health programs

Opportunities for connection with a network of evaluators and exposure across CDC

Substantial professional development, mentorship, support, and visibility

Eligibility Criteria

- Be a U.S. citizen or permanent resident with a green card status that is valid for at least two more years from the start of the fellowship (mid-August).
- Have significant applied program evaluation experience and be able to document three projects that demonstrate the depth and breadth of the evaluation experience
- Have a doctoral or master's level degree from an accredited academic institution in a field relevant to CDC's work
